Foreword

This publication is intended primarily for the use of the administrative officer at a diplomatic or consular mission, or international organization who traditionally is involved in assisting the mission's personnel and family members during their stay in the United States in obtaining services from the Department of State. The responsibilities for the administration of relations between the United States and foreign missions are divided between the Office of Protocol and the Office of Foreign Missions. Guidance for Administrative Officers provides summary guidance on obtaining services from each office.

We anticipate there will be changes to this electronic publication whenever significant changes in policy or procedure occur. These changes will be announced on the Office of Foreign Missions home page (<http://www.state.gov/ofm>), and hyperlinks to them will be provided.

This edition of Guidance for Administrative Officers is available only in electronic format.

Comments and inquiries regarding this publication should be directed to (202) 895-3544 or OFMinfo@state.gov.
